17. p-hydroxy benzoic acid is less acidic than benzoic acid, Salicylic acid is 15 times more acidic than benzoic acid because.

O=C(O)c1ccc(O)cc1
 p-hydroxybenzoic acid.

O=C(O)c1ccccc1
 Benzoic acid.

- The presence of hydroxy group in p-hydroxybenzoic acid makes the molecule less acidic than the absence of hydroxy group.
- The benzoic acid consist of only carboxylic acid at p-position hence makes it more acidic.
- whereas the salicylic acid consist of two carboxylic group than the benzoic acid.
- The presence of 2-COOH group makes salicylic acid 15 times more acidic than benzoic acid.

Abstract

Sargassum ilicifolium (SI) is a tropical and subtropical marine macroalgae (brown algae) found in coastal areas of India. This study investigated the anticonvulsant activity of Sargassum ilicifolium in maximal electroshock (MES) induced convulsion and pentylenetetrazole (PTZ) induced convulsion in mice. The result of present study indicated that chloroform extract (600 mg/kg) and ethanol extract (400 mg/kg and 600 mg/kg) of Sargassum ilicifolium significantly decreased the duration of tonic hind limb extension in MES model, as well as it significantly increased the latency to onset of convulsions in PTZ model. These results were comparatively similar with the effect of phenytoin (25 mg/kg) and phenobarbitone (20 mg/kg). This activity may be due to the presence of alkaloids, terpenoids, flavonoids, steroids and saponins in chloroform and ethanol extracts of Sargassum ilicifolium. However, further research will be necessary to investigate the exact mechanism underlying this anticonvulsant activity.
