Insect Medicine:Anting: It is self anointing behaviour during which birds rub insects usually ants on their feathers and skin. The insects secrete liquids containing chemicals such as formic acid which can act as insecticide, fungicide or bactericide (Active anting)

The birds may lie in an area of high density of the insects (Passive anting)

Microbial medicine: Inclusion or eating bacteria.

Wood ants: The wood ants, Formicaparalugubra often incorporate large quantities of solidified conifer resins in their nests. The resin inhibits the growth of pathogenic microorganism inside the nests. Dr. A. M. Ittadwar
